

“Did You Know” Video Series #1

Did you know the first five minutes of the day can make a huge difference in your child’s progress toward listening, talking, and reading?

Set your child up for success with this simple morning routine.

First thing in the morning, check your child’s devices and batteries to make sure they’re in working order. Your audiologist can coach you on your child’s specific devices.

As soon as your child wakes up, put their hearing devices on their ears. Just like you, your child needs to hear their family’s voices and all other home sounds from the moment they wake up.

Then, do a quick listening check using the “Ling Six” sounds. Make sure your child can hear all of the sounds of speech as the devices are programmed.

Finally, observe your child during the day. Keep track of any sounds they might be missing and take a note to share with your early interventionist or audiologist.

For more information on these tips and to download a morning routine checklist, visit us at the website below.